GOVERNMENT POST FOR G. B. HENWOOD

Attorney General Lymburn announced on Monday morning the appointment of George B. Henwood, K.C., to be deputy attorney general of the province.

Mr. Henwood's appointment is to take effect as soon as he is in a position to assume his new duties, which will probably not be until about the end of the present legislative session. The new deputy is a real old timer in Alberta, having come to the province over 20 years ago from Port Hope, Ontario. He first practiced law in Wetaskiwin, later coming to Edmonton where he became a partner in the firm of Henwood & Harrison. Later, the firm changed, and for several years it was known as Wallbridge, Henwood and Gibson. The firm is now that of Wallbridge, Henwood & Cairns.

Mr. Henwood was one of the Conservatives selected as candidate for the last federal election, but withdrew his name in order to permit of a unanimous nomination going to Col. F. O. Jamieson, who unsuccessfully contested the seat—Edmonton Journal.

Mr. Henwood was a partner of E. H. Wilkins while he resided in Wetaskiwin.

CONFIDENTIAL FILES MUST BE PRODUCED

Sharp squalls broke over the first meeting of the public accounts committee of the Alberta legislature as it embarked on the session on Tuesday morning, following the initial gathering was solely for organization and for the selection of a list of witnesses to be called and evidence to be produced.

When Attorney General J. F. Lymburn protested against the production of confidential files of the provincial police branch as a "principle," his objections brought about a sharp clash with Lucien Boudreau, member for St. Albert, who said he wanted to examine Commissioner W. C. Bryan of the A.P.P. regarding the investigation of the St. Albert election charges and in connection with other matters.

However, when Mr. Lymburn insisted that the production of the court records should be sufficient, both Mr. Boudreau and Captain J. T. Shaw, Liberal leader, explained that there were documents which the court would not have submitted as evidence.

L. A. Groux, Groux, warmly protested against the attorney general insisting on "star chamber" methods, asserting that if the committee was not to be given access to any documents other than those of a confidential public character by the attorney general, then the committee might as well disband and not waste any more time at the inquiry.

Hon. Mr. Lymburn eventually accepted a suggestion of Captain Shaw that Commissioner Bryan and other officials bring such documents as are considered necessary to the committee, and where it was deemed essential that information be withheld, that the committee decide on each case as it arose.

During the wrangle, Lucien Boudreau stated most emphatically that he was prepared to commit or "on the street" to repeat his allegations against the liquor commissioner, R. J. Dinning, and other officials of the insurance and liquor branches.

KNOB HILL

A most pleasant evening was spent on Tuesday, the 8th, at the Knob Hill Saw Mill Co., when Rev. F. G. Mathews, of the United Church, who has been giving services to the lumbermen during the winter, was given a surprise party and a purse of money.

The Home Mission Committee of the church are to be thanked for sending Mr. Mathews to this district. The men in the camp have greatly appreciated the lantern lectures, evening school and social and religious services given. Mr. Mathews has had the hearty support of the managers of the camp.

The bush boss, C. Ringburg, was active in arranging the evening's program. Mr. Mathews, the camp chef, was chairman. Mrs. C. Elison, who is at the organ and Mrs. C. Anderson poured the coffee. Speeches were made by C. Elison, C. Ringburg, W. Mathews, and A. Donald, several musical selections and the ladies of the camp served dainty refreshments.

Your scribbles consider this a most unusual thing to occur in a lumber camp and news worth reporting.

The men wish to thank, through your paper, the Home Mission Committee for sending a minister here, also the managers of the Knob Hill Lumber Co. for making it possible for the minister to hold meetings in the camp.

You would not be ashamed of your stationery if it had been printed at The Times office.

TWO NEW TAXES FOR ALBERTA FORECASTED

Edmonton, March 16.—Forecasting revenues of $12,801,044.54 for the calendar year of 1927, expenditures of $12,474,888.05 in the same period of current account, and an estimated surplus of $326,156.49, Provincial Treasurer R. O. Reid tabled the budget of the provincial government in the legislature Tuesday afternoon.

These figures are exclusive of telephone revenue, estimated at $3,382,000, and telephone expenditure estimated at $3,361,668.18, leaving an estimated telephone surplus of $20,333.82 for the year.

Two new taxes are announced. One is a five per cent tax on the turnover of part-mutual machines at race tracks in the province, which the treasurer estimated, will produce $100,000 in revenue in 1927.

The other is the additional one cent per gallon tax on gasoline, which the treasurer estimated, will produce an additional $250,000 from this source, bringing the total tax on gasoline to three cents per gallon.

WINFIELD NEWS

T. T. Turnbull, who has been spending the winter with his daughters in Kelowna, B.C. is with us again. He says in Kelowna the birds are singing, and the trees, etc. are in bud. It sounds nice but our town will surely come.

Mr. and Mrs. Weatherall left Winfield last Wednesday for the coast. Mr. Drader's new sawmill is now in operation. He has three engines, one of 100 horse power, giving him lots of power to run the machinery all at one time. He also has an electric light plant, and a spur from the railway enables him to load the cars right in his own yard.

The Fraser Lumber Co. have taken a timber limit four miles north of Winfield. They are bringing a new outfit of machinery from Ontario. There is now four sawmills within four miles of Winfield.

Mrs. Johar has been confined to her bed for three weeks through sickness. We wish her a speedy recovery.

EARLY BIRD ARRIVALS

With the advent of the month of March with its traditional cold east winds, great occasional flurries, thoughts of most people turn to the spring, which is usually "just around the corner." Bird lovers within the next two weeks will be on the lookout for early arrivals of migratory birds. It might be interesting to note the dates of arrivals of the early visitors last year. On March 14, the first Bluebirds were observed; on March 16, Tree Sparrows were observed, while a solitary "Kildeer" was also noted. The Canadian Warbler was placed in the first arrival in 1927.

Every year, without fail, the arrival of the first Robin is reported weeks before it is possible for these friendly little customers to arrive. Upon investigation, it is invariably found that the "Robin" is not a robin, but the Pine Grosbeak, a bird somewhat similar in appearance to the robin. At present, there is a flock of these beautiful birds wintering in Canmore, where they spend a few weeks living off the seeds of the Mountain Purple.—Canadian.

WEDDINGS

DILWORTH — OWEN

A very pretty wedding took place at the Sixth Avenue Pentecostal Tabernacle, Vancouver, on Wednesday, March 2nd, at 8 p.m., when Edith Rebecca, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. L. Owen, of this city, became the bride of Mr. Harley Dilworth, of New Westminster, B.C., the Rev. P. R. Maddaford officiating. During the signing of the register, Mr. Harold Barnes played a violin solo.

To the strains of Lohengrin's Wedding March, played by Mr. Lionel Maddaford, the bride entered the church, leaning on the arm of Mr. J. Hammond, who gave her in marriage. She was lovely in a gown of ivory flat crepe trimmed with seed pearls, her veil of embroidered silk net was worn coronet style and held in place with a wreath of orange blossoms. She carried a beautiful shower bouquet of Ophelia roses, lily of the valley and fern.

Miss Laura Tuck, of Vancouver, was a dainty bridesmaid in gentian blue, with picture hat of grey, green and blue. She carried pink carnations and fern. Little Joan Chapman was the pretty flower girl wearing pink tulle and carried a basket of narcissus and carnations.

The bridegroom was ably supported by Mr. Claude Manthorpe, of New Westminster.

A reception followed at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Hammond where only the immediate friends of the bride and groom were present.

Later Mr. and Mrs. Dilworth left by boat for Seattle on their honeymoon. For travelling the bride wore a rosewood crepe de chine dress, bolero style, with an orange blossom coat and squirrel neckpiece, the gift of the groom. On their return they will reside at New Westminster.

The gifts were numerous and beautiful, showing the esteem in which the young couple are held.

WORST STORM FOR 25 YEARS AT SASKATOON

Saskatoon, March 16.—At 11 o'clock last night, what is conceded by old-timers to be the worst blizzard in 25 years, was still raging. Canadian National trains are being held here while the track ahead is being cleared by snowplows. A freight train is completely stalled in the drifts at Brunell, Sask., some 18 miles south-east, on the main line.

The blizzard started at seven o'clock Monday evening and has been raging ever since. It is reported as getting ever sicker. In Saskatoon street car and automobile traffic has been badly dislocated and with a falling thermometer winter conditions are resumed. At 8:35 the Canadian National railway's international, east-bound, due at 5:50 o'clock, was waiting for the plows to clear the track ahead. Canadian Pacific trains were reported on time.

More than nine inches of snow had fallen by 8 p.m. Sutherland, three miles away, lost its street car connection for the day, so heavy were the drifts.

WHAT A BILLION DOLLARS WILL BUY

A man says he offered Henry Ford a billion dollars for his business. "A billion in cash," was the expression, but of course nobody could assemble a billion in currency without creating a panic, for the entire circulation of American currency is less than six billions.

But assuming that Mr. Ford sold and received a billion in money and equally acceptable securities, what could he do with it? What is the greatest single thing that he could buy for a billion? The answer is Vermont. If Mr. Ford could send his agents in with a billion dollars and buy at the estimate placed upon the census bureau in 1921 he could own the entire real estate in the state.

He could own the real estate and improvements, live stock, farm and factory implements and machinery, water works, steam railways, trolley lines, motor vehicles and gold and silver. All these, including the highest, were valued by the census bureau at $442,000. The odd change which he would pay Ford something with which to pay taxes.—New York Sun.

Use Good Clean Seed For First Quality Crop

The wheat pool is strongly advocating that members send only good clean seed in order that the high quality of Canadian grain may be maintained. Wheat grown on the Canadian prairies has the reputation of being the best wheat in the world. The wheat pool is obtaining substantial premiums for its members' wheat over the prevailing price for wheat grown in other lands. This high standard should be maintained.

Of late there has been a tendency for Canadian wheat to be a mixture of many varieties, some of which are inferior to Marquis. This is a dangerous drift and should be discouraged. The pool is concerned in maintaining the high milling and baking qualities which have made Canadian wheat very popular in importing countries.

The use of good seed means higher yields, better grades through maturing evenly and freedom from weeds and intermixtures of other grain. Good seed germinates vigorously and uniformly and gives a higher percentage of seedlings capable of resisting unfavorable climatic and soil conditions.

George Metcalf, western sales manager for the wheat pool, says: "From the standpoint of the wheat salesman I would desire nothing better than that all our wheat in the province of Alberta be of the highest grade. It is my opinion that the European miller will always desire to purchase reasonable quantities of high grade Canadian wheat. He must purchase wheat to give the necessary strength to his flour. There is no question but that the world at large appreciates the quality of our high grade wheat. In my opinion anything that the growers of this province can do to make a purer grade of seed will be a decided aid to the pool in the sale of its wheat to the world's market."

LEDCU TEAM ARE 1926-27 CHAMPIONS

The hockey season closed last week when the finals in the Big Four league were played. Ponoka was in the finals, but lost both games to Ledcu, who are the 1926-27 champions. A second round of hockey was given but the general public did not take much interest in it in the immediate past seasons. It looks as if Ponoka will require a covered rink before high-class hockey can be made to pay.—Ponoka Herald.

ALLEGED FORGERER IS ARRESTED AT WINNIPEG

Winnipeg, March 15.—Richard Shephard, 32, wanted in Alberta on a charge of forgery, was picked up in a roundup at Winnipeg. He is alleged to have secured $50 when he forged the name of John Lundberg, of New Norway, Alberta, to a cheque. He will be returned to Red Deer for trial.

cause, I am unable at the moment to say, but intend to find out.

When the leader of the opposition expressed his disapproval of the reductions made in income tax while no corresponding reduction was made in general taxation, I quote a part of his speech in connection with the case of a man with an income of $50,000 a year, and there are many in that class—the government has granted a reduction of $1,107 on income tax; to the man with an income of $40,000 a year there is a reduction of $587; to the man enjoying an income of $20,000 a year, the government has granted relief to the extent of $154; to the man enjoying an income of $10,000 a year, the reduction is $29.80, but to the great mass of the people of Canada the reduction is a single dollar on every purchase of $100 worth of the necessities of life."

And this reduction of $1.00 to the consumer was made on the sales tax.

Further Mr. Guthrie said that the Conservative party objected to the principle upon which the reductions of taxation had been made. The government, he declared, had not followed the principle of the greatest good to the greatest number, but had brought down a rich man's budget.

Of course opinion may differ as to the advisability of the government's policy in this regard and also as to the effects of that policy. The U.P.A. opinion will be reflected in the amendment which that group moved.

Perhaps the most significant utterance of the opposition leader was his denial that the Conservative policy on the tariff was a high tariff policy. "This denial will be hard to believe in the west, so I will quote its exact words from Hansard. After having congratulated the present government on the reduction of income tax and higher and higher protection. Nobody in the Conservative party seeks or desires any such thing—we ask for reasonable and adequate protection."

Mr. Guthrie indicated that the budget of the Liberal party afforded a "reasonable and adequate" protection.

Nevertheless the opposition voted against the budget and against the amendment. Apparently the Conservatives agreed with the government on the reduction of income tax and the condition of the national debt. They agreed with the U.P.A. members on the latter two points, but disagreed with our demand for tariff reduction and so voted against both the government motion and the U.P.A. amendment.

Now as to the position of the opposition I think the public in general should know the attitude of that party toward the tariff issue and the budget in general as stated by Hon. Mr. Guthrie in his budget speech. I want to refer to two or three points made by him for the purpose of showing the ground of attack on the budget made by the Conservative party and to point out what appears to be a change of attitude on the part of Conservatives in respect of tariffs.

Hon. Mr. Guthrie drew attention to the announced reductions in our national debt. According to the minister of finance, there was a reduction of $30,409,000 in 1925; $35,993,000 in 1926; $27,706,000 in 1926; or for three years alone a total reduction of $94,108,000. Contrary to this, Mr. Guthrie pointed out that according to the public accounts only $21,000,000 of a net reduction had actually taken place during the years above given.

Now who is right in this matter? This will be the question on the lips of every reader. I have to answer that up to the present I do not know. But I do know that the minister of finance refused to answer this question put to him on the floor of the house regarding this whole stoutly maintaining that his figures of reduction were correct. So whether or not the discrepancy is due to methods of bookkeeping or to a more serious

ST. PATRICK'S NIGHT AT KIWANIS CLUB

The members of the Kiwanis club had a very enjoyable time at their luncheon Tuesday evening. Rev. R. H. Lytle of Edmonton, was the speaker for the occasion, and he spoke especially of St. Patrick, and referred to many of the traditions attributed to that saint. He referred to his work in Ireland, after he had prepared himself for the priesthood in a foreign country. He was bitterly opposed by the Druid priests, but his work was favored by the king, and he eventually succeeded in converting the pagans to a belief in the Godhead, and the shamrock is used as the symbol of the three persons—the Trinity. St. Patrick had enjoyed the esteem of both the Roman Catholics and the Protestants in Ireland and he will continue to do so.

The speaker referred to his visit to Ireland about three years ago, when he was glad to find that the Roman Catholics and Protestants felt that they had gone far enough with their foolishness and were ready to stop quarrelling. The stage is now set for Ireland to see the day for which she has longed for generations past, when Protestants will recognize that the Roman Catholics can find good at the R.C. altar, and the Catholics will have a more friendly feeling towards the Protestant church, and that eventually all will join together and sing "Ireland Forever." The speaker interlarded his address with many humorous Irish stories, which kept his hearers in a very happy mood. Vice President George James acted as chairman.

THE WEEK AT OTTAWA

By William Irvine, M.P.

The budget debate ended on March 16, 2. The amendment moved by Mr. Côté, U.P.A. member for Macleod, was rejected by an overwhelming majority. Not only did the major parties combine against the amendment, but the Liberal Progressive members also voted against it.

I think it advisable to say something about the budget and the amendment. So far as the tariff is concerned there is absolutely no reduction whatever. On this matter I have nothing to say beyond that the people themselves will have to be the judges. Were the U.P.A. members reasonable or not in expecting the Liberal government to reduce the tariff in view of the declared policy of the Liberal party? Or were the U.P.A. members not justified in asking for a tariff reduction in view of the position of the organized farmers on that issue? I do not wish to say that the Liberal government is right in not reducing it. I must leave that for them to explain, but if it is so that the tariff as now imposed is the best for Canada as a whole, the Liberal government or any other government should frankly state its position and not talk lower tariffs during elections while maintaining high tariffs untouched when in office. That is all the criticism of the present government which I have to make at this time.

Now as to the position of the opposition I think the public in general should know the attitude of that party toward the tariff issue and the budget in general as stated by Hon. Mr. Guthrie in his budget speech. I want to refer to two or three points made by him for the purpose of showing the ground of attack on the budget made by the Conservative party and to point out what appears to be a change of attitude on the part of Conservatives in respect of tariffs.

BEAU GESTE

By PERCIVAL CHRISTOPHER WREN

This was getting dreadful.

"I did not carry it down, as I carried Beau. I took it by one foot and dragged it down."

"Lejane?" I whispered.

"Yes, Lejane, with your bayonet through his heart. He won't give dumb evidence against you—and Beau had his 'Viking's Funeral' with a dog at his feet."

"Where was it?" said Digby, in the tone of a man waking from a nap.

"Oh, yes. And when all was ready, John, I sat and talked to Beau and told him I hadn't the faintest idea as to what he had been up to this 'Blue Water' business, but what I did know was that, far from being anything shady, it was something quite and noble. And then what do you think I did, John? I fell asleep—and slept till the evening..."

"I was a bit more like my own man when I woke up. I went up on the roof to see what was doing. I saw that the company was parading, and that I had cut it pretty fine. I thanked God that I had awakened in time, for in a few minutes they would be marching in, to clean up and take over."

"I crept back and set fire to Beau's funeral pyre. Then I rushed off and poured a can of oil over the pile of benches and furniture that I had heaped up in the next room. I set light to that and knocked another can over at the foot of the stairs. I lit it and bolted up to the stair of the look-out platform. At the bottom of this, I did the same, and by that time it would have taken more water than there is in the Sahara to put the fire out. I decided that Beau's funeral was all right, the evidence against you destroyed, and the time arrived for me to clear out."

He yawned prodigiously.

"So I came to look for you, John."

"To look for... for..."

Digby was asleep.

I decided to watch for an hour or so, while Digby slept. At the end of that time I would wake him and say that I was going to make the attempt to get a camel.

After waiting a couple of hours, I woke Digby up.

"What about it, Dig?" I said. "Are we going to have a shot at getting a camel or are we going to march? We must do one or the other, unless you think we might do any good here by daylight."

"Oh, quite," replied Digby. "I'm sure you're right, John, and went to sleep again, in the act of speaking."

I was trying to make up my mind whether I should give him another hour, or wake him up again at once, when I saw two camel riders approaching us.

I rubbed my eyes. No. There was no doubt about it. A patrol was going out, or dispatches were being sent to Tokota.

There were two camels. Two well-fed, well-watered camels were coming towards us.

Rheumatism

In Weak Condition

Mrs. Middleton Collins, R.R. No. 3, Fort Perry, Ont. writes—"I am the mother of four children, and after my third baby was born I got rheumatism which left my heart in a very weak condition. I was like that all summer long and could get no relief. My sister-in-law told me to give a try, so I did, and took two boxes of them and I am now enjoying perfect health. I trust they will help others as they have helped me."

On the first sign of any weakness of the heart or nerves, you should not wait until your case becomes desperate before you avail yourself of relief by using Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills as they will tone up and strengthen the nerves, build up the muscles of the heart, and enrich the blood.

Price 50c. a box at all druggists or dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

The camels drew nearer and I decided, from their direction, they were on the way to Tokota.

I crawled down the reverse slope of my sandhill and crept along the valley at its base. Climbing another hill I saw that a repetition of the manoeuvre would bring me on to their line. I did not know what I was going to do when I got there, but there was no time in trying to find out who they were.

Suddenly a well known voice remarked conversationally:

"We sure gotta put them nigs wise, Buddy. We don't want nawthen to eventuate to the pore boobs through us, not takin' them by the hand."

"Hank!" I yelled in glee and thankfulness, and he and Buddy turned their camels towards me.

"Here's one of the mystery boys, anyhow," went on Hank. "I allowed as how you'd be around somewhere when we see you all three missing from the old home."

In a valley between two sandhills they brought their camels to their knees and dismounted. Both wrung my hand in a painful and most delightful manner.

"Was it you who had the accident with the cigar-lighter, an' kinder caused arseholes' proceedings?"

"No," I said. "It was Digby who set fire to the fort."

"Then I would shore like to shake him by the hand, some," said Hank. "Is he around?"

"Having a nap over there," I said. "The other bright boy, too," asked Buddy. "An' where's Lejane? Havin' a nap?"

"Poppy by the way, an' I let him out into the garden for to admire."

As quickly as possible I informed them of Michael's death and the "funeral."

"He was a shore white man, pard, 'not said," commented Hank.

"He was 'all wool-an'-aard-wide," said Buddy, and I felt that Michael might have had worse epithets.

A brief silence fell upon us.

"Go!" said Hank, after a while. "Wouldn't it 'jar you? It shore beats the band. Such nice quiet boys, too."

A few minutes later each of the camels bore two riders, and we were paddling off at a steady eight miles an hour.

"Any pertickler direction, like?" said Hank, behind whom I was riding. "London, N.York? Morocco? Egypt? Cape Town? All the same ter me."

Buddy drove his camel up beside ours.

"What about it, Dig?" said I. "We have to get out of French territory. Morocco's—northwest; Nigeria is southeast."

"And where's water?" replied Digby. "I should say the nearest oasis would be a sound objective."

"It's there's a pursuit, they take the line for Morocco for certain, I should say," I pointed out. "I vote for the opposite direction and a heady eye on our fellow-man, if we can see him. Where there are Arabs there will be water somewhere about, I suppose."

"Shore!" said Hank. "We'll pursue the poor Injun. What's good enough for him is had enough for us. You say where you want to go, and I allow we'll see you there—but it may take a few hours. What we gotta do first is turn Injun, see? Git Injun glad rags and live like they does. We're well armed and got our health and strength an' hoss-sense. When in the desert do as the deserters does. Yep. We gotta turn Injun."

"Injuns live by lettin' other folks produce an' then collectin'," put in Buddy.

"We gotta collect," said Hank. "From the collectors," said Buddy. It seemed a sound plan, if a little difficult of operation. However, I had infinite faith in the resourcefulness of the two Americans, and reflected that if anybody could escape from this predicament, it was these men.

"I vote we go south-west," said Digby. "We're bound to strike British territory sooner or later and then we're bound to fetch up in Nigeria if we go straightly southwest. If we could hit the Niger somewhere east of Timbuktu—it would lead us straight to it."

"Plenty o' drinkin' water in the Niger, I allow," observed Buddy, but there didn't seem ter be no sign posts to it. It shore is a backward state, this Sahara...

"Anyway, it's southwest of us now, and so's Nigeria," Digby insisted.

BABY'S OWN SOAP for the Nursery

"Well, then—you got the lot, ain't you?" asked Hank. "What's bittin' you now, Bo?"

"Do you mean you're comin' with us?" I asked, a great light dawning upon me.

"You shore said a mouthful, Bo," replied Hank. "Do you think we'd leave you two innocent children to wander about this shorl world all on your lones?"

"Toughen'd be right, boy. 'Course we're comin' along," put in Buddy.

"Starboard yer hullum," observed Hank. "Nigeria on the port bow—about one thousand miles."

And that night we did some fifty or sixty of them without stopping, by way of a good start—a forced march while the camels were good and strong.

As we padded steadily along we took stock of our resources.

With my bottles of water, and the regulation water bottles, we had enough for two or three days, with careful rationing.

Similarly with food. I had a haversack full of bread, and the other three each had an emergency ration as well as army biscuits.

Of ammunition we had plenty, and we hoped to shoot dorcas gazelle, bustard, and hare, if nothing else.

Had Michael been with us, I should have been happy. As it was, the excitement, the mental and physical activity, the hopes and fears attendant on our precarious situation, and the

During the last few weeks The Times has added a large number of new subscribers to its mailing lists. This is very gratifying to the management, as it is evidence that The Times is the popular paper, and that it is giving the news the public demands. Nearly all the new names added are of people living in Wetaskiwin and district. This increased circulation enhances the value of The Times as an advertising medium. Think it over!

Capt. Rear Poirer, the French aviator, told an automobile story during his recent American visit. "A friend of mine," he said, "gave a shik in an automobile ride last year in the heart of the desert. The going was very hot. The desert was so hot, in fact, that the car tilted over and the shik was dumped out. Instead of being angry he scrambled up and hurried to climb in again, with profuse apologies to my friend 'I'm very sorry but I haven't learned to ride one of these things yet'."

Here and There

Passengers aboard the Canadian Pacific Empress of Scotland were not deprived of visiting China on the present round-the-world cruise of this ship, on account of the recent trouble in that country. Word from the cruise director is to the effect that the passengers received a warm welcome at Shanghai and that the Chinese were most friendly.

A new Canadian bird, the "turken," has made its appearance. It is a cross between a turkey and a Rhode Island hen, and was first brought to public attention at the Edmonton poultry show. George Spurgeon, who raised it, claims that it will effect a revolution in the poultry business, as it combines the best features of the hen and the turkey. It has a hen body and a turkey head.

His Majesty King George and H.R.H. the Prince of Wales have notified the British section of the World's Poultry Congress that they intend to exhibit poultry at the congress exhibition to be held in Ottawa from July 27 to August 4 next. There is also a possibility of the Queen of the Netherlands and King Alfonso of Spain sending exhibits, in which case the Canadian capital will be the first city in the world privileged to house the exhibits of several royal flocks.

The Indians of the three prairie provinces last season produced approximately 1,000,000 bushels of grain, of which about half, or 488,000 bushels was wheat, according to a recent government report. There are about 35,000 Indians in the area in question and the portions reserved for their use include some of the most fertile land of the west. They had 97,000 acres of land under cultivation in 1926 and they own about 25,000 head of cattle and 35,000 horses of a good type.

Warren Cordingley of Ashton, Idaho, won the 85 mile dog race from Calgary to Banff held recently in connection with the Banff annual Winter Carnival. The race was one of the hardest fought in the history of these events. Cordingley's lead dog broke down and was carried to the finish line on the sled. The Mills' team, of Banff, picked to win the race, was attacked by town dogs near Calgary. Both driver and dogs were badly bitten but stuck to the trail and finished.

IT'S ALL IN THE STATE OF MIND
 If you think you are beaten, you are;
 If you think you dare not, you don't;
 If you think you're like to win, but you can't,
 It's almost a 'clutch' you want;
 If you think you'll lose, you've lost;
 For out in the world you'll find Success begins with a fellow's will—
 It's all in the state of mind.

Think big, and your deeds will grow;
 Think small and you fall behind;
 Think that you can and you will;
 If you think you are outclassed, you are;
 You've got to think high to rise;
 You've got to be sure of yourself before
 You can ever win a prize.

Life's battles do not always go
 To the stronger or faster man;
 Ere even his work's begun.
 You can guard under lock and key. So we cannot tell for a while yet whether or not lace will be worn at the wrist.

But sooner or later, the man who wins
 Is the fellow who thinks he can.

Men's spring styles, according to a New York despatch, are being guarded under lock and key. So we cannot tell for a while yet whether or not lace will be worn at the wrist.

The wedding gown, according to a Paris designer, is easily convertible. Into, for instance, a flirty little divorce suit.

Nature being a capricious female—more so than the average—does not flout all her fiery where it is to be seen most readily. If you want to see her gayest gown you have to hunt for them, and that is why some of the rarest scenery on earth is to be found in the least accessible spots. One such spot is Alaska, though it is no longer inaccessible. The Canadian National Steamships with their fleet of palatial oil-burning steamers have overcome that handicap and Alaska can be reached today as readily and as pleasantly as any spot on the continent. The long days, the sheer beauty which rises on every hand and the air of romance that still clings to its name, have combined to make the Vancouver-Prince Rupert-Alaska trip of the Canadian National Railways one of the outstanding features of the summer tourist season.

The photographs reproduced above depict some of the attractions. No. 1 shows the end of the Taku Glacier, which is 90 miles long and from which great bergs break off to float away with the tides. No. 2 shows the Mendenhall Glacier near Skagway, the most northerly port of call. Below it (No. 3) is seen the Miles Canyon on the Yukon River, made famous in the days of the Gold Rush and the Trail of '98. No. 4 is a view of the Narrows at Wrangell, where evidence of the old Russian regime still exist. In No. 5 a group of young folk are enjoying themselves fox trotting on the deck of one of the Canadian National Alaska service steamships and on each side of the bay-out rises one of the many interesting Totem poles which can be seen at Juneau, Ketchikan, or at any of the other ports already mentioned, which comprise the calling points on this famous trip to the real land of "The Midnight Sun."

In the woods near Senlis, a suburb of Paris, a woman of the village ran Grand Carnival march at Banff headed by Mounties. Upper inset: Mary Cross, Queen of the Carnival packing a pony. Lower inset: Scene at the crowning of the Queen of the Carnival.

The annual Winter Carnival at Banff, which was concluded recently, was marked by the fact that the visitors at this mountain resort played a prominent part in all the sports to a much greater extent than in former years. It was ac- claimed as the finest in the history of Banff.

For weeks the town gradually put on her carnival garb, and on the opening day the streets presented a festive appearance. One of the most impressive ceremonies in connection with the carnival was the resigna- tion from the Queenship of the carnival by Miss Mary Cross of Cal- gary. Stoney Indians in their pic- turesque tribal costumes began a hunt for the new Queen, who was finally found in a gaily bedecked tepee. Miss Emily Mason, of Cal- gary, was chosen for the position of honor for the coming year. The girl noticed that he looked rather unlike the usual pig of the neighbor- hood. But he developed into a gentle and pleasant pet. Then, one day, a friend of the young woman came to call on her, and in the course of a walk

ADMISSION OF FAILURE

A year or so ago we heard a great deal about Garnet wheat. It was represented as marking a large agricultural advance. Doubts were expressed as to the soundness of the claims that were being made for it, and now it is admitted that it has proved largely a failure. Those who have seen fields of it alongside other varieties will not be at all surprised by the report that has just been issued from Ottawa.

The federal department of agriculture states that, after having conducted an extensive test, it "cannot recommend Garnet as a substitute for Marquis in districts where the latter variety may be depended upon to thrive successfully." The most that is said for it is that, where conditions are favorable to the proper development of Marquis, it may often be found profitable to cultivate Garnet on part of the area devoted to wheat. From the standpoint of milling and baking quality the new variety has been found to rank lower than the old and it is particularly open to criticism because of the color of the flour.

It is pointed out that Garnet matures from five to ten days earlier than Marquis and about a day ahead of Ruby and that there is accordingly advantage in sowing it in the early frost belt. But when early ripening is a matter of great importance, farmers should not overlook the claims of the "University No. 222" wheat, which was produced at the University of Alberta eight years ago. Careful kept records indicate that it yields seven bushels to the acre more than Marquis and ripens six days earlier, while its milling qualities are quite as high.

Last season brought out another virtue in a remarkable way. It resisted drought exceedingly well. Seven magnificent fields of it were to be seen in August in the vicinity of Edmonton, which had no rainfall for six weeks. Yields as high as fifty bushels were obtained from these and cutting was finished before the bad harvesting weather set in. Nothing like the same nobility has been given to "University No. 222" as Garnet has received, but it is quite clear that in evolving that wheat the agricultural department at the provincial institution achieved something for which the farmers are greatly indebted to it. —Edmonton Journal.

companionship of my brother and those two fine Americans combined to help me to postpone my defeat by the giant of misery, pain, and grief that were surely only hiding their time, lurking to spring when I could no longer maintain my defences.

Digby, I think, was in much the same mental condition as myself, and I wondered if I too had aged ten years in a night.

As we jogged steadily on, the monotony of movement, of scene and of sound, sent me to sleep, and every now and then I saved myself from falling by a wild clutch at Hank, behind whom I was sitting.

No one spoke, and it is probable that all of us slept in brief stretches—though they must have been very brief for those who were driving the camels.

I came fully awake as the sun peered over the far-distant edge of the desert to our left.

"For years was badly constipated and troubled with gas after eating. Could not eat fruit and many other things. Adherika has done me good—can now eat anything," (signed) W. H. Fletcher. Adherika removes GAS and other things from the stomach. Brings out a surprising amount of old waste matter you never thought was in the system. Stops that full bloated feeling and makes you enjoy eating. Excellent for chronic constipation. Northern Drug Company.

"You've got 'em," replied Digby, looking behind us we topped a ridge of rock.

On we drove, southwest, through what was, comparatively speaking, in the cool of the morning, until Hank thought that we should be making more haste than speed by continuing without resting our camels.

"I don't propose to know much about those dogged shamrogs, as they call 'em," observed Hank, but I allow you can't go very far wrong if you treat 'em as horses."

"Shore," agreed Digby, "except that they got more control of their passions than the thicket of a nigger's butt."

"I've heard of 'em eating people's hats at dime shows and menageries," said Hank. "My Aunt 'Mandy went to Ole Man Haroun's show on her golden wedding day, and a camel bowed her hat and all her back hair, and she never knewed it till she felt a draught."

"... Yeh. They kill her own people! If they wait till we got some injun shapies an' pants an' things..."

I was aware that camels had meagre appetites and queer, limited tastes, embracing a narrow selection ranging from bean to the taste of don't-they-buck, but I agreed with Digby that we should have to give them something, and something other than our caps. Our lives depended upon these two ugly, unfriendly beasts, for without them we should either be quickly recaptured or else we should die of thirst and starvation, long before we could reach any oasis.

In the rapidly narrowing shadow of a providential great rock in this thirsty land, we lay stretched on our backs, after an asseptic meal of bread and water.

"What's the program of sports, Hank," I asked, as we settled ourselves to sleep.

"Another forced march for git outta the onhealthy location of Zinderneuf," he replied. "Then we gotta scout for injuns or an oasis. Spread out in a four-mile line and peek over every rock and hill. ... We'll shore fix it." And he went to sleep.

Personally I slept till evening without moving, and I was only awakened by the grumbling, gurgling roar of the camel that Hank was getting up, one of his feet pressed against its side and all his weight and strength on the girl-rope.

Having put the camel-blanket on the other animal, I lifted the wooden framework regulation saddle onto it, girthed it up, taken the nose reins over the beast's head and looped them around the pommel, he bawled, "All aboard," and stood with his foot on the kneeling camel's fore-knee, while I climbed into the rear part of the saddle. He then vaulted into the front seat, and the camel, lurching heavily, came to its feet with an angry, hungry roar.

Digby and I mounted the other beast, and once more we were off, not to stop, until we estimated that there were at least a hundred miles between us and Zinderneuf.

Again I slept, spasmodically, towards morning. I was awakened from a semi-slumberous state of coma by an exclamation from Digby, to realize that it was day again, the camels were standing still, and their riders gazing at what Digby was indicating with outstretched arm.

Over the level stretch of unbroken sand which we were crossing, ran a broad and recent trail of camel foot-prints.

The trail crossed ours, though not at right angles. If we were going southwest, I should think the riders were going south—or north.

Hank and Digby brought the camels to their knees, and following the footmarks and examining them carefully, they decided that there were about twenty camels in the party, that they were going south, and that they had passed quite recently.

"What we bin lookin' for," observed Hank with grim satisfaction, as he swung himself back into the saddle. "The nearer we git to them injuns, the quicker—but we don't wanta tread on 'em. Keep yer eyes skinned, boys." And the others having remounted, on we went.

I should think we followed this trail for three or four hours without seeing anything but the eternal sand and rock.

We had come to the bank of a very wide and rather shallow dry riverbed, and the place looked as though a river had flowed along it ten thousand years ago. Hank was pointing to a spot to which the footprints led.

Beneath a huge high rock that rose from the middle of the river bed was a dark inviting shadow around which were dry-looking tufts of coarse grass and low thorn bushes. The camels were perceptibly eager to get to this spot.

"Water," said Hank. Beneath and around the rock was a pool, fed presumably from a subterranean source. It wasn't the sparkling water of an English spring, bubbling up among green hills, by any means, but we were not fastidious, and certainly the camels were not. On the contrary, we were delighted.

Here were shade, water and camel food, giving us a new lease of life, and encouragement on our way. It was evident that a party of travellers had halted here.

"Good old Tounarags," said Digby. "We'll follow them as long as they are going our way home."

"We gotta do more than follow 'em," said Hank. "We gotta catch 'em up. They gotta lend us some correct desert-year striped gents' suitings. Like-wise grubstake us some."

"Shore," agreed Digby. "An' we ain't no hoss thieves neither, but they gotta lend us a couple o' good camels too."

From the first the Americans were anxious to secure Arab dress, both on account of possible pursuit from Zinderneuf and as being less conspicuous. They were doubly anxious to procure the disguise on learning that, in the south, towards Nigeria, there were numerous forts and outposts of the French Niger territory, and numerous patrols would carefully watch the caravan routes and visit the Arab towns and settlements that existed.

Accordingly, Hank decreed that we must push on, only enough time being spent here for the camels to eat and drink their fill.

The Tounarags hands make an annual tour and visit the villages of an enormous area, in the spirit of somewhat arbitrary and indiscriminating tax-collectors. What they want, by way of tax, everything the villagers possess that is portable, including the young men and maidens.

If the villagers are reasonable and relinquish everything, with a good grace, there need not be any bloodshed—very little, just in the way of fun and sportive merriment.

The Tounarags do not wish to destroy the village and slaughter the inhabitants, because they prefer to find a peaceful and prosperous community into which to return.

After about three hours' rest, we pushed on again, and rode for the remainder of the day and right through the night. The fact that we did not come up with our quarry seemed to confirm the theory that they were a war party on raiding business. Peaceful caravans and travellers would not travel at such a pace, and we should have overtaken such a party easily.

A SEVERE COLD TURNED TO BRONCHITIS

However slight a cold you have you should never neglect it. In all possibility, if you do not treat it in time, it will develop into bronchitis, pneumonia, or some other serious throat or lung trouble.

Mrs. Marlett, R.R. No. 1, Simcoe, Ont., writes:—"I caught a severe cold that settled on my lungs and turned into bronchitis. I tried many different remedies, but they all seemed to fail. I then got a bottle of and after the first few doses I found wonderful relief, and before I had used the whole bottle I was completely relieved of my trouble."

Price 50c a bottle; large family size 1.00 for sale at drug stores and dealers; put up only by The T. Millers Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Delicious satisfying

Suddenly we heard distant rifle-fire to our front—a few scattered shots. Simultaneously Hank and Digby brought the camels to their knees among the rocks, and we dismounted, unslinging our rifles as we did so.

"Mustn't get the shamrogs shot up," said Hank to me. "You hold 'em Bo, while we rubber around some," and they skirmined forward.

Nothing further being heard and nothing seen, they returned and we rode on again.

Presently we saw an ugly sight. A woman had been tied to a tree and horribly mutilated. It was evident that she had been herded a block of goats.

"Village near," said Hank, and he and Digby again simultaneously wheeled the camels round, and we retired behind a hill and dismounted. "We'll corral the horses here, and scout some," said Hank. "It'll be worth dollars to see those damned cories before they see us."

This time the camels were tied with their agals, and left. We advanced on a trail, as though to the attack of an Arab dour, a manoeuvre with which our training had made us only too familiar.

LONE RIDGE

The Hightway Ladies' Aid society are holding a sale of fancy work and useful articles in the Lone Ridge hall on the evening of April 1st. The most interesting feature of the evening will be the two hour play entitled "The Little Childminder," this play to be acted by seven of the young people of the community. See posters for further particulars. Everybody welcome.
 If you do not know what a snow-drift looks like, come out our way—we can show you.
 From far and near upwards of 300 friends and well-wishers of Mr. and Mrs. Ole G. Olson assembled in the Lone Ridge hall on Saturday evening, March 10th, to voice their regrets that they were leaving the district. Mr. and Mrs. Olson were presented with a lovely matted clock and a full set of table linen on behalf of the community by R. E. Sparks, who in well chosen words, spoke of the good work done by them in the interests of the community and the esteem in which they were held. Mr. Sparks also wished them health, wealth and happiness in their new home. Mrs. Olson was also presented with a gold brooch on behalf of the U.F.W.A. The evening was passed in community singing, musical selections, readings, etc. A supper was served by the ladies of the community and a very enjoyable evening was brought to a close by all singing: "Auld Lang Syne."

MALMO SOUTH

Miss Mildred Smith, teacher of the Star school, spent the week-end with her parents at Portintosh.
 The Swedish Lutheran Ladies' Aid society met at the home of Mrs. John Tunnis, Sr., on Tuesday last, and despite the heavy roads, quite a number of members were present, also several visitors.
 Mr. Elen Larson was a business visitor to Wetaskiwin last week.
 The large crowd which attended the program at Water Glen hall was not disappointed, as the different numbers rendered were excellent. Much credit is due Miss Molly Henderson, whose untiring efforts made the evening's entertainment such a success. A delicious lunch was followed by a dance for which "peppy" music provided by Jack Shaw's orchestra.
 Mr. and Mrs. G. Tunnis will leave shortly for Edmonton, to be the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Vera J. Tunnis.
 The neighborhood of young people from the south, who attended the dance at Malmu hall on Friday last, spent a pleasant evening, despite the fact that they were almost the entire crowd.

A novelty dance is being put on by the Bankers, in the Portintosh hall, on Thursday, March 17. A good time is assured, and everybody is welcome.
 Miss E. Albers spent Sunday with the Misses E. and V. Tunnis.
 Mr. and Mrs. G. Tunnis had at their dinner guests on Sunday, Mrs. John Tunnis, Sr., and Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Tunnis and family.
 Mr. and Mrs. Lou H. O'Neill entertained at a party and dance at their lovely home in Portintosh recently. A

Was Nearly Crazy With Headaches

Mrs. G. Brown, Consort, Alta., writes: "I was troubled with very severe headaches, and sometimes was nearly crazy with them."
 One day a friend told me about
BURDOCK'S BLOOD PURIFIERS
 and advised me to give it a trial. I decided to do so, and after taking three bottles I found it had done me a world of good, and I haven't had the least sign of a headache for a long while.
 Put up only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

delightful time was spent in cards and dancing, and at midnight a dainty lunch was served by the hostess. Many of the younger out-of-town set attended. Everyone present voted it as being an evening long to be remembered.
